Family relations and values are one of the main links of Uzbek society. The activities of the great representative of Uzbek classical literature Alisher Navoi and his scientific heritage play an important role in the formation and development of these traditions. In his works, Alisher Navoi paid great attention to the issues of family relations, child rearing and marriage. His heritage is an invaluable source for studying the history of family traditions of the Uzbek people. Almost all of Alisher Navoi's didactic works touch upon family values. In particular, these relations are particularly touched upon in such works as "Khamsa", "Mahbub ul-qulub", "Hayrat ul-abror".

The works of Alisher Navoi are of great importance in studying the history of Uzbek family values. In his works, Navoi paid special attention to the issues of family relations, child rearing and marriage. He gave detailed thoughts on the role of the family in society, the rights and obligations of spouses, and the duty of children to their parents. The ideal family model described in the works of Alisher Navoi reflects the family values of the Uzbek people.

In addition, the works of Alisher Navoi had a great influence on the formation and development of Uzbek family values. His thoughts and ideas were widely spread among the people, serving to strengthen family relations and traditions. Navoi's works have been read as favorite books in Uzbek families for centuries and play an important role in educating young people. The legacy of Alisher Navoi is of great importance in studying the history of family traditions of the Uzbek people. His works contain valuable information on issues of family relations, child rearing, and marriage.

The image of the perfect family depicted in Navoi's works reflects the family values of the Uzbek people and had a great influence on their formation. Navoi's work "Khamsa" occupies a special place in highlighting the issue of family relations. Through the images of lovers such as Farhod and Shirin, Layla and Majnun depicted in the work, Alisher Navoi glorifies family values such as true love, loyalty and fidelity. The issue of family relations is also highlighted in the epic poem "Khairat ul-abror", which describes the relationship between husband and wife based on mutual respect and honor. Navoi's work "Mahbub ul-qulub" is devoted to the issue of raising children. In the work, Navoi emphasizes the role and responsibility of parents in raising children. He calls on parents to teach their children good manners, etiquette and knowledge. Navoi's thoughts have not lost their relevance today and can serve as a guide for modern parents. The issue of marriage is also widely covered in Navoi's works. He interprets marriage as a sacred union and calls for a serious approach to it. The wedding ceremonies and traditions described in Navoi's works reflect the marriage values of the Uzbek people. Navoi's works also describe the wedding vows, applause, and other traditions associated with the wedding ceremony.

The legacy of Alisher Navoi is important not only for studying the history of Uzbek family traditions, but also for their further development. There is no doubt that Navoi's thoughts and ideas serve to strengthen and develop modern Uzbek families. The ideas put forward in his works on family values, child rearing and marriage issues remain relevant today. At the same time, it is necessary to study and analyze Navoi's legacy in more depth. His works can serve as an important source in studying the history of Uzbek family traditions. Studying the influence of Navoi's ideas on modern Uzbek families is also an interesting direction. This, in turn, further increases the importance of Navoi's legacy and serves to promote his ideas among the general public. The legacy of Alisher Navoi is an invaluable source in studying the history of family traditions of the Uzbek people.
